

Howard County Medical Center Names New CEO

Howard County Medical Center is pleased to announce that Arlan Johnson has accepted the position of Chief Executive Officer. Arlan has been with HCMC since October of 2007 in the role of Clinic Director. Prior to joining the medical community, Arlan was the Branch Manager at Bank of the West in Grand Island for three years and Branch Manager at two different banks in the Chicago area for nearly 13 years. “Becoming the CEO for Howard County Medical Center gives me the opportunity to provide stability for our facility, and help our hometown hospital continue to grow into the future” states Arlan Johnson.

“We are very excited to be able to promote from within our organization, as Arlan is a very willing and capable individual. The Board of Trustees has complete confidence in the job he will be able to do. He already knows our staff, the facility, and the challenges coming up, and will be ready to hit the ground running when he assumes CEO responsibilities on July 1st,” states Carol Schroeder, Board President.

The Medical Staff is equally eager to see Arlan in his new role, “We are excited about Mr. Johnson becoming our new CEO. We feel he will bring his appetite for improvement and great leadership skills to the forefront of our facility. This seamless transition should allow for future growth and development of our hospital’s vision,” states Chief of Staff, Dr. Jared Kramer.

Arlan currently lives in St. Paul with his wife Kori, a kindergarten teacher, and his four children: Brandon, Madison, Gunnar, and Emily.
